PARNELL, Melvin Lloyd

MEL

Born: June 13, 1922, New Orleans, La. Ht.: 6'; Wt.: 180 lbs. Green eyes; Black hair. Bats and Throws: Left. Home: New Orleans, La.

Pitched no-hit, no-run game against White Sox, 4 to 0, July 14; first no-hitter at Fenway Park since Ted Lyons of Chicago won, 6 to 0, Aug. 21, 1926; first no-hitter by a Red Sox pitcher since Howard Ehmke won, 4 to 0, at Philadelphia, Sept. 7, 1923; first such masterpiece by a Red Sox hurler in his home park since Ernie Shore no-hit Washington, 4 to 0, June 23, 1917 . . . The more remarkable because Mel's early-season comeback bid was halted when he sprained his left ankle sliding into second base at Detroit, May 16, the injury sidelining him until June 23 . . . Turned in his most productive season since he was 21-game winner in 1953; now boasts lifetime record of 123 victories, most ever by Red Sox left-hander . . . Handicapped by injured knee in 1955 and by broken left forearm during 1954 season . . . A World War II Army air force veteran . . . Married and has a son and three daughters, including baby girl born last Aug. 14.

PIERSALL, James Anthony(Peer'saul)*JIMMY

Born: November 14, 1929, Waterbury, Conn. Ht.: 6'; Wt.: 190 lbs. Brown eyes; Black hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Newton, Mass.

Brilliant defensive seasons were nothing new for Piersall . . . Was one of two players (along with New York's Mickey Mantle) to appear in all games last season . . . Topped all outfielders with .991 average — only four errors in 469 total chances . . . Led league in doubles (40) and sacrifice flies (12) . . . Offensively had his biggest year with 176 hits for 270 total bases, including 14 home runs, one of them an inside-the-park homer at Fenway Park, a rarity . . . Four more hits over the season would have gained him a .300 average for first time in his major league career . . . Won All Star honors in American League last year and in 1954; also in American Association in 1950 and Southern Association, 1951 . . . Worked as good will ambassador for food concern the past winter . . . Married and has four daughters, Eileen, Doreen, Claire, Moira Ann, and a son, James Jr. . . . His life story, entitled "Fear Strikes Out", has been filmed in Hollywood.

UPS AND DOWNS

The Red Sox' role in the 1956 American League pennant race was of an elastic nature. By winning the first three games of the campaign the Boston club jumped quickly into a tie for first place, but fell gradually to fifth place by the end of the month of April. Still fifth on May 5, the Red Sox rose to second spot in the standings three days later, and alternated between third and fourth the remainder of the month. It was back to fifth place on June 5, followed by a gradual climb to third spot on June 17. The club finished out June in fourth place, climbed to third again on July 17 and remained there until August 9. On that date the Red Sox moved into second, eight games behind league-leading New York. On August 12, they fell to third, 10½ games out, and then alternated between third and fourth until September 13, whence they remained in fourth place to finish 13 games off the pace.

RECORD CHANGERS

The Red Sox and New York changed a major league record in their game at Yankee Stadium, September 29, 1956, when 44 players participated in the 13-inning contest. The Red Sox used 18 players, the Yanks 26. The Red Sox won, 7 to 5.
